

Queen's Graduate Computing Society Conference
School of Computing, Queen's University

Friday March 11, 2011 and Saturday March 12, 2011

The School of Computing fosters great accomplishments in various domains of Computing. The broad spectrum of research topics explored in our School provides an exceptional opportunity of collaboration between our twenty-two active research laboratories. Inspired by the academic excellence, and magnificent ambience, of the school, the Graduate Computing Society (GCS) invites all graduate students in the School of Computing to the Second Annual Queen's Graduate Computing Society Conference (QGCS 2011). The conference will be a two-day event promoting oral and poster presentations with the contribution of key note speakers.

QGCS 2011 provides a means for our students to present and share their scientific contributions and innovations, even if previously published, with their colleagues and other interested audience at Queen's. The conference offers a common venue to proactively exchange ideas and facilitate future collaboration opportunities.

This conference will feature two presentation methods for students:

- Short presentations (length TBD based on submissions)
- Posters (Presented at a Poster Session)

All graduate students are encouraged to submit an abstract highlighting the research they wish to present, while mentioning the preferred presentation method. The QGCS Submission Review Committee will notify the presenters of the opportunity to present. Best presentation and best poster awards will be presented at the end of the conference.
